Tilden, for the first time in many mons, had a decidedly "off" day, his latel of errors reading thirty-two, only mo less than Washburn's, and his tarned points only fourteen, five of these being service aces. But this was left the national singles champion's saly mistakes yesterday. The cold figures do not disclose the tactical ergors made by Tilden in this match. His packing on his partner's court, while mainly, to win the points, finally acted alversely on young Richards, who had been playing brilliant, if a trifle untereday, tennis all through the first two
